

IEEE and IEC standards require a disconnecter operate at currents ranging from 20 to 800 Amps. The Hubbell design operates at currents as low as 1 Amp. It additionally prevents thermal runaway scenarios that may occur with resistive graded disconnectors.

